

Promoting Healthy Masculinities: A Workshop for Parents and Professionals

A full day conversation on supporting boys with
Stephen Grant LCSW, Howard Hiton LPC, and Peter Mortola PhD

We have become all too familiar with demonstrations of unhealthy masculinity: sexual abuse, harassment, supremacy movements, and bullying of anyone who dares step outside the "gender box" of manliness. Where are the models of the range of healthy masculinities? Given all the examples of how boys should not act, how can they act?

In this workshop we will address some of the most challenging issues related to raising boys such as aggression, sexuality, gaming, competition, communication, and relationships. Participants will leave with a broader and more compassionate understanding of the dilemmas boys face, as well as strategies for helping our boys develop in healthy, confident and relational ways.

About the presenters:

Stephen Grant, Howard Hiton and Peter Mortola have over fifty years combined experience working with boys and their families. Stephen is a school social worker, Howard is in private practice, and Peter is a professor of counseling psychology. Together they authored BAM: A Leader's Guide to Facilitating Strengths-Based Groups for Boys. They are also each fathers of two sons.

Participants will:

- Explore the research and theory underlying many boys' relational styles.
- Discuss the most common struggles parents face in raising boys.
- Gain skills to more effectively guide boys.

$200 registration fee includes a copy of the BAM! Guidebook, morning coffee, and a light lunch. Lewis and Clark CEU credit available for an additional $15.00 payable by check at the workshop.
